Developing, Evaluating and Critiquing Business Valuations for Litigation

Determining the value of a business can seem a daunting task to a litigator. But, when the case calls for it, effective advocacy requires at least a basic understanding of the fundamentals of business valuation. Among other things, a litigator must be able to recognize when a valuation is necessary, work with an expert to develop the valuation, present valuation testimony in court, and critique the other side's valuation and cross-examine the opposing expert. Join respected business valuation expert Serena Morones and veteran litigators Keith Ketterling, of Stoll Berne, and Kim McGair, of Farleigh Wada Witt, for an inter-active discussion of these topics as they explore business valuation from a litigation perspective.

For more information: Call Keil Mueller, Stoll Berne at 503.227.1600. For registration questions, call the MBA at 503.222.3275.
